HAMILTON, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22, 1874. The Call for Spring. Tarry not, then gentle maiden, In the hard where summer dwalls: Come with song and perfume laden To the waiting woods and dells. Come ! amid the branches hoary, in the forest we have heard Senseibing like a plaintive story Something like the south wind sight To the noisy neethern blast, That would deign no sell replying, Eyes whose light has long since faded dilates with a kineting beam. When the earth by clouds o'grahaded,

Come and kiss them into smiling— Tell them all thy Fairy Tales; Full of strange and a cost beguling As the flowers would and value. Call them to the hills and valleys, From the dump and dingy room; From the darkered lanes and alleys,

They are pining for the freedom— For the flowers and birds of spris Come and listen, gratic maiden—
